Sullali is a new way of seeing Franciacorta. It arises from the idea of creating a product that fully reflects the quality of this extraordinary area. The reinterpretation in a modern way of the Ancestral Method allows this Franciacorta to ferment in bottle using the residual sugars coming from the first fermentation. Sullali is made with carefully selected grapes, from which only the must produced with the softest crushing is taken. After being fermented the first time and maturing in steel tanks, Sullali is bottled with yeast that is specific for refermentation, without adding extra sugar. 24 months of ageing are necessary to obtain the distinctive characteristics of this Franciacorta. During disgorging, a small amount of liqueur d'expedition, produced with part of the original wine, is added to obtain an Extra Brut product and maintain the fresh, citrus notes that confirm Sullali as an innovative leader in Franciacorta.
